Education guide

Introduction

Immediately east of Canary Wharf, the Royal Docks is emerging as a new district for business and culture in London. Over £8bn in investment is flowing into the area over the next 20 years. Improvements to transport, streets and open spaces are underway, preparing for an estimated 24% population growth in the wider area.¹

At the heart of the Royal Docks we’re creating a new place to call home. Globally renowned architects, Skidmore, Owings and Merrill, are the studio behind 35 Hudson Yards in New York, Dubai’s Burj Khalifa, the China World Trade Centre in Beijing — and now Royal Eden Docks.

These homes have wellbeing designed in. Light-filled, thoughtfully laid out, with landscaped garden space for all — 5,000 sq m of it in total. Two private, leafy courtyards. Green rooftops. 17 fitness and relaxation amenities. All less than 100 metres from the water’s edge.

It’s just a three-minute walk to Custom House station, where Crossrail services are set to begin in 2020. That gets you to Canary Wharf in three minutes and The City in 10.

A new district for London designed around health and wellbeing, with landscaped green space at its heart.

This is Royal Eden Docks.

A new street linking to Custom House (Crossrail and DLR) and Royal Victoria (DLR) station

A British Education

30 primary schools, 15 secondary schools and three colleges with an ‘Outstanding’ Ofsted rating, less than three miles from Royal Eden Docks.²

British education is internationally renowned and remains at the forefront of educational innovation and creativity. Revered the world over, good British schools are as diverse and distinct as the children within them and provide the most influential examples of what a good school can and should be.

Whether state, independent, boarding, day, preparatory or senior – British schools prepare children for life and open doors to the most prestigious universities and career opportunities worldwide. Each school is unique, yet displays the character that is the hallmark of a well-educated child: self-confident with a breadth of interests and qualifications.

Education in and around the Royal Docks

With over 650 schools within a five mile radius of Royal Eden Docks, including 259 schools within three miles, a wide range of schools are available in both the state and independent education sectors to best suit any individual child's needs.

Primary schooling is particularly strong with a selection of outstanding state schools such as St Luke's Primary School, Faraday School and Culloden Primary – all less than two miles away.

The area also offers a variety of options for secondary and further education within the state system such as the outstanding Brampton Manor Academy, East London Arts & Music and South Quay College.

For those wishing to pursue an independent education, Faraday Prep School offers a co-educational education for 4–11-year-olds, with a further four co-educational independent schools within a three-kilometre radius, all offering education for children aged from four to 16. Blackheath High School, part of the prestigious Girls Day School Trust, offers independent education for girls aged 11–18.

The leading central London universities are all easily accessible, as are Oxford and Cambridge and many other highly regarded Russell Group³ institutions.

The University of East London, one of the most diverse in the country, is 14 minutes from Royal Eden Docks. A short journey on public transport gives access to both Queen Mary University and the University of Greenwich. University College London (UCL), ranked number one in London and 8th in the QS World University Rankings,⁴ 2020, is currently expanding with a new East campus as part of the re-development of the Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park, with the first phase scheduled for completion by September 2020. The new campus will be easily accessible from the main Bloomsbury site, with high speed travel from London St Pancras International to Stratford International taking just seven minutes.

Crossrail is anticipated to start from Custom House station in 2020, connecting Royal Eden Docks with top universities in London such as London School of Economics (LSE), Kings College London and University College London within 30 minutes.

³ The Russell Group "represents 24 leading universities which are committed to maintain the best research, an outstanding teaching and learning experience and who have unrivalled links with business and the public sector". www.russellgroup.ac.uk
